PAVO IV

With the Pavo IV, SIMPLON show the world that it's possible to produce first-class carbon frames in Europe. The Austrian manufacturer's road bike cuts a great figure both in a fancy designer living room and out on the road, meeting the highest technical demands while at the same time offering a fine blend of design and workmanship. When developing the Pavo IV, SIMPLON's engineers put aerodynamics and weight efficiency high on their list of priorities. The result is a 7.34 kg all-rounder that strikes an excellent balance between speed and lightness, while at the same time offering a high 125 kg max. permissible weight. On top of that, the Pavo IV impresses with excellent power transfer, which ensures a lively, nimble character. All of this is topped off by balanced, predictable handling and countless clever details, which round off the overall harmonious blend of look, feel and technical sophistication. Our jury was truly impressed with the SIMPLON Pavo IV, which delivers tons of fun on every ride.
